Please send your feedback to ios@indeed.com Do Not Sell My Personal Information: of Use: Policy: May 6, 2025 Version 260.0 Bug fixes and various improvements! Only rating it so people who search five stars can really read it. It seems now a days employers are creating fake job postings to gather data. They won't even answer or have a position open they just repost to seem as if they are a growing company but never hire. Do not take my word for it do your own research it's out there semi being suppress but it's out there. Indeed won't do anything about it neither will its sister app Glassdoor, it seems it's all the hiring apps or websites are doing this to an extent. What a shame I'm struggling to find a job I hate unemployment it's degrading yet I can't get a simple email or call back. I don't know what will happen but I hope to find something soon, just keep that in mind if you decide to walk out without having something in your back pocket jobs don't care for you so just do what you get paid for and don't ever over work your self and get out to something else. Think something fishy is up. 15 jobs applied with one one company getting back to me. You check on a post 2-3 days later and the job post expired so you start a new search and bam.... The same posted job is shown. Talked with the one company that got back to me about emails stating "you were not chosen for the job." or similar. Company states this is an issue with the app. When they move a potential employee from one section to another the email(s) are automatically sent out stating that you were not selected ect. Kind of strange right? Starting to wonder if employers are getting the information sent to them. Update.... 70 jobs applied. "2 companies" reached out after my 1 star review about indeed. Only after my one star review! Look at job postings, you will see more and more "this position is not a position yet...". Why post jobs or allow companies to post if they are not real. You would think that indeed, a job listing/finding service would only allow jobs not well maybe in the future.... Wish I had money to fix indeed or apple for allowing apps like this. Stay away from. Way too many "possible" jobs listed by companies, companies put that in the listing that the post is not a job just a position they are the thinking of creating. So indeed is not a place to find a job rather it is an app to view jobs that could be a job. I have major privacy concerns with this app. Despite having done my part in app to secure whatever information I can- I still get texts messages from illegitimate "employers" with "job offers". NO LEGITIMATE employers are going send you texts like "We saw your resume on Indeed blah blah blah click this link to apply" Clicking that link is a good way to forfeit sensitive information from your mobile device. My information via résumé should only be visible to the jobs that I'm applying to! PERIOD. Despite trying to put as much on private as I can through your app, I still get these text. Which has lead me to believe that it's likely very easy for illegitimate individuals to create employer accounts. No legitimate employer is going to be so informal! That's a RED FLAG! The other thing you guys should be aware of any job listing that its "commission only" or "appointment-based only"? Those are NOT in any way shape or form legitimate employers. What they are is scams. If a listing doesn't offer an hourly wage? IT'S A SCAM. That is just an opportunist looking to make money off of the people in a bind. Who are unsuspecting & none the wiser. Filter those out of your listings IMMEDIATELY! I hope you take the information I have given you & IMPROVE the user experience. DO BETTER!
