New york times mini puzzle answers today

Looking for a little help with today's NYT Mini Crossword? Whether you're stumped by a single clue or just want to double-check your answers, we've got you covered with all the solutions and a breakdown of each clue from today's puzzle. Today's Mini puzzle offered a clever mix of simple and tricky clues — with one particular down entry stumping even seasoned solvers. Need a hint? Think old-fashioned beverages! Read on for today's complete solution and a look at what made this puzzle stand out. 1A. Unit of distance that can precede "stone" and "age"Answer: MILEThe word "mile" fits both phrases: "milestone" and "mile-age." A clever wordplay clue that rewards lateral thinking. 5A. Kind of powder used for hot chocolateAnswer: COCOAA straightforward clue, especially for those with a sweet tooth. Cocoa powder is a staple ingredient in hot chocolate. 6A. On the buttonAnswer: EXACT"On the button" means something is precisely right — making "EXACT" the perfect answer. 7A. ConnectionsAnswer: LINKS"Links" works both in the digital sense (hyperlinks) and in social or network connections. Short but versatile. 8A. " ___ not and say we did!"Answer: LETSThis playful phrase — "Let's not and say we did" — is often used humorously to decline an idea. The missing word is "LETs." Also read: NYT 'Strands' Hints, Spangram And Answers For Friday, May 16 1D. Gutsy determinationAnswer: MOXIEThis was one of the tougher clues of the day. "Moxie" is an old-school term for courage or nerve — also the name of a vintage soda brand, which might've helped older solvers or trivia buffs. 2D. "That's not gonna work for me"Answer: ICANTThis informal expression signals refusal or impossibility. "I can't" is a common phrase, but the casual tone of the clue made it more relatable. 3D. StrandsAnswer: LOCKSMultiple meanings here: "Locks" of hair are literally strands. The clue might have thrown off some players looking for a verb. 4D. Has a biteAnswer: EATSA simple verb clue. If someone "has a bite," they eat — as in "grab a bite to eat." 5D. Spreadsheet unitAnswer: CELLAnyone who's spent time in Excel or Google Sheets should get this quickly. A spreadsheet is made up of many individual "cells." Today's puzzle leaned into wordplay and double meanings, which are always more challenging in the Mini's compact format. While the grid is only 5x5, the clues pack a punch. The standout clue was 1D: Gutsy determination, with the answer "MOXIE." This isn't a word you hear every day, especially for younger solvers. If you've never heard of Moxie the soft drink, the clue may have left you scratching your head. But that's what makes the Mini fun — it surprises you! Another clever entry was 7A: Connections, which could've easily gone in multiple directions. "Links" nailed the clue's ambiguity perfectly. If you're new to The New York Times Mini Crossword or simply looking to improve your solving skills, here are a few quick tips: Start with the easiest clues. Don't get stuck — fill in what you know and work from there. Think about wordplay. A clue like "Connections" may not mean relationships; it could mean internet links. Use crossing words. When stuck on a word, look at the intersecting letters from across or down answers to help figure it out. Stay relaxed. The Mini is meant to be a quick, fun brain teaser — enjoy the challenge! Related: You can play the current day's Mini Crossword for free via The New York Times Games section, either on the website or the NYT Games app. However, if you want access to previous puzzles or other games like Wordle, Strands, and Connections, you'll need a Times Games subscription. Our daily guide to NYT's The Mini will help you finish today's edition—and every day's puzzle—in no time. Whether you're a serious crossword fan or just love a good challenge, this page is your go-to for quick answers and tips. The Mini Crossword is a shorter and more accessible version of the traditional NYT crossword puzzle, designed to be completed quickly. It typically features a 5x5 grid and a set of clues that are often playful or punny. However, recently, NYT has made it a little more challenging for cruciverbalists on Saturdays by adding more than five down and across clues to solve. Its brevity makes it suitable for a quick daily mental exercise. Solve your daily crossword grid systematically. - "Across" crossword clues are typically numbered left to right. Almost finished? Fill in what you missed with the ACROSS clues and answers for today's puzzle below. "Down" crossword clues, on the other hand, are typically numbered from top to bottom. Use the DOWN clues and answers for today's puzzle below to complete your grid, one vertical clue at a time. Ready for more challenges? Our solvers are here to help you out. No matter where you are, we are here 24/7 to help you fill in your NYT mini grids. Just a heads up, the daily mini-puzzle resets the night before it's published. For instance, Saturday and weekday puzzles reset at 10 p.m. EST the day before, and Sunday puzzles are ready to solve from 6 p.m. EST on Saturday. So, bookmark this page whenever you need a little extra support with your daily wordplay workout. The New York Times Mini Crossword is a small daily crossword, on Saturdays the puzzle gets bigger and becomes 7 by 7. The mini has been an important game of the Crossword app since it was launched and for many people it paves the way to the bigger puzzle. When the mini becomes too easy to solve and you need a bigger challenge it is time to 'up' your game. Latest Puzzles As the name suggests The Mini is a small puzzle which could be addictive. It is easy to work, it is free - however it is not particularly easy to solve. Some people manage to solve this morning brain exercise under tree minutes but that is not always the case. What we promise you is that no matter how long it takes solving it - you will feel clever after completing it. The short time it takes to finish the puzzle makes it convenient for the game to be a day starter. It doesn't take much from your time and you may play it whenever and wherever you have the time. A Little History In the summer of 2014, a seemingly inconspicuous crossword puzzle debuted in The New York Times. It was the birth of what would later become a beloved daily ritual for hundreds of thousands of solvers, known as the Mini crossword. The journey began with an experiment, and the puzzle's remarkable evolution has since exceeded all expectations. A Modest Start The initial Mini crossword didn't exactly start with a bang. It sparked a flurry of social media chatter within hours of publication due to the inclusion of an abbreviated internet profanity, causing the crossword's creator, a new editorial assistant at The Times, to contemplate whether their first day on the job would also be their last. Swiftly, the clue was revised to reference a musical group, steering clear of slang. The date was August 21, 2014, and The New York Times had recently introduced a crossword app that featured the Mini as part of its offerings. The objective was straightforward: entice more people to try the main New York Times crossword puzzle, renowned for its formidable challenge, which could be intimidating to novice solvers. It is available both for guests and subscribers of the crossword app. The Mini Crossword has had a dedicated author since its first began. The main editor of the mini has been Joel Fagliano, a notable cruciverbalist of the Bigger Crossword puzzle. Fagliano has a long history with crosswords, ever since he played one many years ago he became fascinated by them and had a puzzle accepted in Nytimes when he was 18 years old. He further pursued his passion and managed to get to work as an intern for the Crossword God, Will Shorts. So basically he never had a different kind of job than being a crossword creator and that is a very good signal for the mini, because it's lead by a guy who has Crosswords in his DNA.
