King harris baby dna test

Tiny Harris is speaking out as social media is buzzing with speculation surrounding the paternity of her son King Harris' baby. Tiny Harris shared a festive family photo featuring her new baby grandson amid rumors her son King is not the infant's father. On Tuesday (December 11) the Xscape singer shared some adorable behind-the-scenes images from a Christmas-themed shoot. The photos were taken from T.I. and Tiny's daughter, Heiress Harris' music videos for her upcoming Christmas songs. Tiny explained that Heiress "has been a busy girl," and shot two music videos. "As u can see we got most of the family together to support their lil sis video!" she added. However, the R&B singer also took the opportunity to shoot down recent rumors about the paternity of King's little boy. Tiny questioned how the person responsible for spreading the gossip was getting their information and warned she might have to teach them a lesson. "Don't believe all the lies u read," Tiny urged. "Ppl just use them for clickbait!! How in the hell would this person know anything about what we did or did not do!! Sometimes ppl gotta learn the hard way tho & I don't mind teaching the lesson." View this post on Instagram A post shared by Majorgirl (@majorgirl) Speculation about the baby surfaced following a viral TikTok video claiming that "word on the streets" suggested T.I. was upset after a paternity test revealed King was not the father. However, King's big sister Zonnique Pullins shut down the claims. "lol what street this word come off of chile," she tweeted. Meanwhile, King recently revealed he was settling into fatherhood and adapting to endless sleepless nights. "Truth be told! Before this little n* I ain't been getting no sleep," he said in an Instagram video last month. "But now I'm damn sure not getting no sleep. This n* be up every morning, and then around the morning time he likes to do that little live concert s that I be doing with him. And he like to walk around the house and s. So, that's what I've been dealing with!" While he hasn't addressed the paternity rumors directly, over the weekend, King Harris shared a video with his baby, revealing he still isn't getting any sleep. "This man had me and his momma up since six this morning," he said with a yawn. In a powerful response to swirling social media rumors, King Harris, son of hip-hop power couple T.I. and Tiny Harris, has taken to Instagram to address speculation about his son's paternity. The young father shared intimate family photos that not only showcase his newborn son's striking resemblance to the Harris family but also demonstrate the strength of familial bonds in the face of public scrutiny. The spark of controversy The situation began when TikTok personality Big Bag Doll published a viral video claiming that DNA testing had proven King was not his son's biological father. The allegations spread rapidly across social media platforms, prompting an immediate response from the Harris family circle and ultimately leading to King's decisive action to protect his family's peace. A father's powerful statement On December 20, King took control of the narrative by sharing a series of heartwarming photos featuring his son, King Harris Jr., born in November to King and his girlfriend, J'Nijah "Nana" Epps. The images revealed the infant's unmistakable Harris family features, including his expressive brown eyes and familiar smile, effectively silencing doubters through visual evidence alone. Family rallies in support The Harris family's response to the controversy demonstrated their characteristic unity. Zonnique Pullins, King's sister, quickly voiced her support through social media, emphasizing the importance of maintaining perspective despite online drama. Her comment about staying true to oneself resonated with followers who appreciated the family's united front. The role of social media This incident highlights the complex relationship between celebrities and social media platforms. While these platforms can spread misinformation rapidly, they also provide public figures with tools to address false claims directly. King's strategic use of Instagram to share his truth demonstrates the evolving nature of celebrity response to public controversy. Impact on modern parenting The situation brings attention to the unique challenges faced by young parents in the digital age. King's experience reflects a broader conversation about how social media affects family dynamics and the importance of protecting children from online negativity while maintaining authentic connections with supporters. Generational legacy The photos shared by King feature touching moments with multiple generations of the Harris family, including pictures of King Jr. with his grandfather T.I. and great-grandmother. These images serve as powerful testimony to the continuity of family traits and the strength of generational bonds. Public reaction and support Fan response to King's post has been overwhelmingly positive, with many commenting on the undeniable family resemblance. Supporters have praised King's mature handling of the situation and his dedication to protecting his son's dignity while maintaining his own integrity. The influence of celebrity families This incident has sparked broader discussions about the pressures faced by children of celebrities as they navigate their own paths to parenthood. King's situation demonstrates how public figures can use their platform to address misconceptions while staying true to their values. Looking forward As the Harris family continues to celebrate the newest addition to their lineage, this episode serves as a reminder of the importance of family unity in the face of public scrutiny. King's handling of the situation has earned him respect from supporters while setting an example for others facing similar challenges. A lesson in resilience The way King addressed these rumors offers valuable insights into handling public controversy with grace and dignity. His approach demonstrates that sometimes the most powerful response to negative speculation is simply sharing one's truth with confidence and authenticity. The power of truth This situation ultimately reinforces the idea that family bonds transcend social media drama. King's decision to share his joy and pride in his son, despite attempts to undermine his paternity, speaks volumes about his character and commitment to fatherhood. T.I. and Tiny Harris have seemingly dispelled rumors that their son, King Harris, is not his child's real father. King Harris, 20, welcomed his first child last month, a baby boy with J'Nijah "Nana" Epps. The young rapper has been doing about fatherhood ever since he welcomed his son, but internet trolls aren't allowing him to be the father he wants to be. Some fans left trolling comments under his posts on Instagram, while others made posts on X that fueled the rumors. King Harris' sister, Zonnique Pullins, was the first family member to respond to the rumors. "Word on the streets is that #TI & #Tiny son king Harris is not the father of King Harris Jr.," one person wrote on X reads, to which Zonnique swiftly responded, "lol what street this word come off of chile." Some folks are suggesting that the rapper should do a DNA test to prove he is the father of the child. via Z The rumors have evidently angered Tiny Harris, who has since responded with a holiday photo of herself with her children and grandchildren. She also supported her daughter Heiress, who is on the verge of releasing her new holiday song. "As u can see we got most of the family together to support their lil sis video!" Tiny wrote. "If you haven't downloaded or streaming 'What Does Christmas Mean To You' make sure u go support my baby! This song will touch your if u got one lol!! Thx to everyone who help put this together! Ps Don't believe all the lies u read ppl just use them for clickbait!! How in the hell would this person know anything about what we did or did not do!" View this post on Instagram A post shared by Majorgirl (@majorgirl) Tiny Harris also seemingly threatened to take legal action against the poster of the rumors. "Sometimes ppl gotta learn the hard way tho & I don't [mind] teaching the lesson," she added. T.I. responded by liking his wife's post, showing a united family front. Interestingly, TIP was missing from the family photo, which shows the Harris bunch wearing matching pajamas. In the meantime, King Harris is currently pushing his new song dedicated to his newborn son. Tags: King Harris, T.I., Tiny Harris T.I. Confronts King Harris With DNA Report After Baby Mama Lies About Paternity Drama is brewing in the Harris household as word spreads that T.I. secretly ordered a DNA test on his son King Harris' alleged child—and the results are shocking. The test reportedly revealed that King is not the father of Big Nana's baby, shaking the family to its core. T.I. has since confronted King, urging him to cut ties with Big Nana, exposing the messy situation for all to see. A Father's Doubts Months ago, T.I. appeared on Hot 107.9, revealing that King Harris was expecting a child. While the rapper tried to maintain a playful tone, joking about raising the baby to "torture" King as payback for his antics, fans couldn't help but notice the disappointment in his demeanor. Speculation arose that T.I.'s frustration stemmed from King's young age and perceived lack of readiness to become a father. However, insiders suggest there was more to the story. Big Nana, King's girlfriend and the mother of the alleged child, is significantly older than him, raising eyebrows about the nature of their relationship. T.I., a veteran in the entertainment industry, reportedly saw red flags early on. He warned King that Big Nana appeared to be more interested in the financial benefits and fame associated with the Harris family than in King himself. Ignored Warnings Despite T.I.'s reservations, King continued his relationship with Big Nana, believing he could prove his father wrong. When news broke of Big Nana's pregnancy, T.I. expressed his disappointment, frustrated that King disregarded his advice. Sources close to the family say T.I. believed King was "blinded by love" and Big Nana's influence over him was growing stronger. The tension between father and son was evident to the public. A viral video showed King clashing with T.I. at a sports game, where T.I. chastised his son for acting out and embarrassing the family. King responded by accusing his father of being absent, claiming he only spent time with T.I. when cameras were rolling for their reality show, Family Hustle. DNA Test Revelation Despite their rocky relationship, T.I. felt compelled to protect his son and family. Behind the scenes, he orchestrated a secret DNA test at the hospital where Big Nana gave birth. The results confirmed T.I.'s suspicions—King Harris was not the father of Big Nana's child. Upon receiving the results, T.I. wasted no time confronting King with the truth. Sources describe the meeting as emotional, with King reportedly left heartbroken and in tears. T.I. reiterated that his experience in the industry allowed him to see through Big Nana's intentions and emphasized that King needed to end the relationship immediately. Fallout and Public Reaction The revelation sent shockwaves through the family, and fans quickly weighed in on social media. Many sided with T.I., believing he acted in King's best interest. Comments flooded platforms, with users warning King to listen to his father in the future. "King should've listened. T.I. has been in the game for too long to miss those signs," one fan wrote. Another added, "This girl saw dollar signs. King dodged a bullet." However, some questioned whether T.I. overstepped by secretly ordering the DNA test without King's consent. Critics suggested that while T.I.'s intentions were protective, his methods may have crossed a line. What's Next for King Harris? The situation has left King at a crossroads. With his father's support, he must now navigate the difficult task of ending his relationship with Big Nana and moving forward. T.I. made it clear that, as a father, he had done everything he could to shield King from manipulation, but now the responsibility rests on King's shoulders. As the dust settles, the Harris family faces the challenge of rebuilding trust and addressing the lingering fallout from this scandal. Whether this ordeal strengthens or further divides King and T.I. remains to be seen. One thing is certain—when it comes to protecting his family, T.I. will go to great lengths, even if it means exposing painful truths. Social media has been buzzing with claims that King Harris, the 20-year-old son of T.I. and Tiny Harris, isn't the father of his newborn baby boy. But these rumors seem to be just than online chatter, and King's sister, Zonnique Pullins, isn't having any of it. When an X user alleged that "word on the streets" suggested a DNA test disproved King's paternity, Zonnique swiftly clapped back, tweeting, "lol what street this word come off of chile" Meanwhile, King has been focusing on celebrating fatherhood and his budding music career. "Truth be told! Before this little n* I ain't been getting no sleep, you know what I'm saying. I just been outside... working, working, lifestyle. You know, lifestyle just life-ing," King said in the clip while driving. Since his son's arrival, the lack of sleep has reached a whole new level. King humorously described his son's early-morning antics, saying, "But now I damn sure not getting no sleep. This n* be up every morning, and then around the morning time he likes to do that little live concert I be doing with him. And he like to walk around house, that's what I've been dealing with!" Tags: King Harris,I. son Weeks after a TikTok star alleged that King Harris was not the biological father of his son, the young entertainer shut down the chatter by sharing photos of the little one on social media. The boy was born in November to King and the child's mother, J'Nijah "Nana" Epps, also known as @nanalifneass on Instagram. King's family initially came to his defense against the rumors speculating online. But now the "Drip" rapper and young father has taken to his Instagram to post a lengthy message, blasting the public for believing the gossip without verification. All y'all blogs dat posted all that fake bullsh-t don't say or post sh-t," King wrote in the caption of his post on Dec. 20. "Y'all are not a credible source. I showed y'all how unintelligent y'all is. I never changed y'all just let the internet change y'all view on me," the reality star then added, "but it's ok cuz y'all just easily to be manipulated on social media I'm him in real life no lie or rumors on da internet can take that away." His sister Zonnique Pullins, who was one of the first to defend her brother on the X platform when the rumor emerged, hopped in the comments to co-sign his message. "Heavy on I never changed y'all just let the internet change y'all view on me!!!! FELT," she added. King's post featured a graphic with words, where the 20-year-old told his 873K followers to go see his son on Snapchat, with one message, "Remember all they said about us." Over on the app that deletes posts after 24 hours, he posted a few dozen adorable images of his baby boy. One of the pictures had King Jr.'s big dark brown eyes staring straight at the camera with a white long-sleeved onesie and a head full of hair. Another images shows the baby in a brown little bear snowsuit. King also added pictures of the baby with his paternal grandfather and with his great-grandmother, Dianne Cottle-Pop, aka MeMaw, whom King lived with during his adolescent years and while filming "T.I. & Tiny: The Family Hustle." T.I. and Tiny's son King Harris took to his Snapchat to show off his new son and dismiss rumors the child is not his. (Photos: King Jr., T.I. Harris and Grandma Dianne Cottle-Pope: @kingcharris10/Snapchat) His fans flooded his comment section after going to see his son. The images were also plastered online, receiving comments that ranged from congratulations to dotting on how adorable the little boy is. "King that boy pappy CONGRATULATIONS," wrote one person in the comments of The Neighborhood Talk's post. A second person said, "Can't deny that baby, he looks like Tiny and King." A third comment read, "That's a Harris baby." Most agreed that King was "definitely the daddy," adding that "no DNA test was needed" to confirm the obvious family resemblance. "Tiny mother got them strong genes he look like Great Grandma," said one person, while another added, "The results says: King Harris, you ARE the father and he is cute as a button." One final commentator added, "That baby got TINY all in himmmm plz kings is definitely the pappy." The Xscape singer even jumped into fray again adding, "That's my baby," in the comments. Initially, King kept his son's face hidden or covered with emojis in photos posted online. Some just railed against the bloggers who spread the fake news, writing, "Definitely his baby!! Whoever started that rumor should be ashamed of themselves." On Saturday, Dec. 7, TikTok influencer Big Bag Doll posted a viral video claiming she had knowledge of a DNA test that revealed King is not the baby's biological father. "Hold off on the baby showers, the photo shoots, and all of that until after we got the DNA test," the influencer stated, alleging T.I. was upset over wasted expenses. She went on to claim that no one in the Harris family believes the baby belongs to King after they had genetic proof showing the boy was not his. While Zonnique was quick to shut down DNA talk, nothing worked better than the recent pictures. Also, on Tuesday, Dec. 10, Tiny took to social media to address Big Bag Doll and those who believed her.
